WHY PEOPLE DO NOT VOTE
The principal reason why people do not vote is that they have nothing to vote about.

We are, in the United States, under the Party System. That system works out as a means of getting certain men elected, not to make certain issues triumphant.

For this cause, each party straddles every issue as far as it can.

In the recent political conventions, each party straddled the question of Know-nothingism, Ku-Kluxism, Roman Catholicism, the tariff and every other plain issue.

Men would vote if they had an opportunity to vote clearly upon any subject that interests them.

Both parties now, for instance, are straddling the League of Nations. The Democratic party did not come out straightly and endorse it, neither did the Republican party.

Both those who are in favor of it and those who are opposed to it would welcome some opportunity to express themselves at the polls.

No, with all other voting issues. So long as we are governed by parties, and place our faith in the party system, we are doomed to small and unrepresentative vote because, all in all, the people of the United States do not care which group of men is in power.

What we need is a campaign to bring out the issues more than to bring out the voters. If there was anything to vote about, the voters would be anxious to express themselves.

People who were indifferent as to whether Coolidge, Davis or La Follette were president couldn't be blamed for staying away from the polls.

If we could only go back to the system of our fathers, if we could only get rid of political parties and elect our representatives as they were primarily elected, we might accomplish something.

According to present news the election cost the Republican party several million dollars and also cost the Democratic party almost as much. The Progressives were also anxious to raise funds.

Election by the party system is a wasteful method. It is based upon the system of competition, which is radically wrong. Nothing is gained by men fighting each other, but all is gained by good will and fellowship. This is not promoted by political parties.

It is essentially a system of strife. The reason why the average man does not vote is stated by Principal Jackson:

"He distrusts not only the system, but still more of the type of mind, of personality, of leadership, which has become the recognized exponent of these things, and regards both the system and the mind that works it as not big enough, either morally or intellectually, to govern such a world as ours."

In New York

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The money changers have entered the temple of art. St. Paul bows his head as the throng passes in the Metropolitan Museum of Art. He was bought in 1921 for $30,000, under the representation that he was born several centuries ago under the genius of Luca della Robbia.

And now Jean Vigoroux, noted art critic of Paris, says that the statue is a fake. And further, that very many of the paintings and sculptures bought by the nouveau riche of America since the World war are fakes.

Not downtown, St. Paul. Even the blessed Virgin has been battered under false pretense.

In the south of France, at the close of the war, an ancestral chateau. An impoverished son of an impoverished father.

In Paris, an American woman worth millions.

An invitation to visit the chateau at night. The government will not permit art treasures to be taken out of the country.

A friend warns her that she is to be duped. She is offended at the suggestion and accepts the invitation.

By flickering candle light she is shown musty old paintings. Candle light and secrecy from the government—something romantic about that.

Madame will take the Raphael at five figures.

The cute little wormwood holes in the frame were shot in with a shotgun. The picture is at least three weeks old.

Angelo, Turner, Raphael, de Vinci, Botticelli, Corot—what crimes are committed in the names!

Wanted millions of dollars for their stuff before purchasing copies of their masterpieces. Dull women seeking brilliance from musty counterfeits.

Money will buy anything for those empty heads—even reality for a false Madonna.

FURTHER HEARING IN DUFF CASE
LIKELY FOLLOWING K. C. S. REFUSAL

Over Sunday developments have indicated that Col. Duff is not yet out of the woods in his struggle to obtain I. C. C. consent to his proposed railway extension from Livingston to Port Arthur. There has been, of course, no decision made by the I. C. C. in the case. But the result of oral arguments launched by both Duff and the K. C. S. in the controversy had indicated that there were two alternatives in store for Port Arthur—either that the K. C. S., as the commissioners themselves are understood to have hoped might eventuate, would extend permission to Duff to use that rail line's facilities to Port Arthur; or that failing this Duff would be given the permission to construct new facilities.

In either of these events it was indicated that Port Arthur would score, since by means of one of them, it was indicated, Duff would be able to reach deep water here.

Today advices from Washington state that a new hearing is in prospect following failure of the negotiations between Duff and the K. C. S. The Kansas City Southern, according to information, has refused to grant Duff permission to use its facilities from Beaumont, L. F. Loree, chairman of the K. C. S. board, emphatically opposing such a procedure.

Responsibility for the refusal, even though Duff himself was not in favor of the proposal, lies at the doors of the K. C. S. protestants in the fight, though Duff was actuated by a different consideration in his attitude than the K. C. S. since he believed that his new line would be placed under a handicap right from the start because use of the K. C. S. facilities would deprive him of much profitable freight.

The K. C. S. on the other hand found itself in position of raising a monopoly which it has enjoyed here to the extent that to date it has successfully denied all comers any part of its docks, wharves and facilities. Apparently Loree viewed any loosening of the barriers as a dangerous procedure, since it would establish a precedent which Loree believed would be fraught with serious consequences.

The K. C. S. fight is not only against Duff, but against any proposal for opening up the docks here, and is consistent with the general policy of that road to perpetuate its monopoly of the Port Arthur waterfront.

The K. C. S. does not want Port Arthur to grow, since that growth some day would spell danger to its monopoly, and if Loree had his way he would scrap Duff's entire line and all the towns and rich agricultural and industrial territory it passes through and forever rid the K. C. S. of this menace to the K. C. S. "divine right" to control.

WILLIAM J. AND WALL STREET

William Jennings Bryan has deserted Nebraska for Florida and will spend his remaining years in the everglade state. Thirty years ago William J. began his crusade against Wall Street. He has damned it in every American state and territory, in all the books he has written, in all the speeches he has made and in all the articles he has written for the press.

Every 4 years Bryan goes down in defeat and Wall Street comes up smiling. This year Nebraska landed in the republican camp, notwithstanding that brother Charles is governor of Nebraska and had the second place on the democratic ticket. William J. is a powerful advocate of the state income tax as well as heavy inheritance taxes.

Florida is a democratic state. Florida sent W. J. B., a delegate at large, to the Madison Square Garden convention. He functioned as usual while there. He denounced Wall Street as the lair of the devil and all aspirants for presidential honors from the east as both unholy and unfit.

Then, November 4, the democrats of Florida by a vote of 8 to 1 adopted an amendment to the constitution prohibiting the levying of income or inheritance taxes by their state. Newspaper and civic organizations campaigned actively for its passage. If a state income tax and an inheritance tax are good enough for New York, which included Wall Street in its jurisdiction, then why aren't they good enough for Florida?

Now the former apostle of the Platt is planning to discontinue his lectures and correspondence indefinitely and will devote his time to writing his memoirs. This gives the lie to the statement that dead men tell no tales.

COST OF AMERICAN WARS

War is costly but the savage industry will be continued until the end of time. Since the year 1790 payments of pensions by the United States to veterans of all wars, except the world war has been $6,836,182,860. Of this total $6,500,000,000 was paid for the civil war. Fifty years hence the people then on earth will know just how much the world war cost the American taxpayer.

Your Money AT WORK

Brief but Important Lessons in Finance, Markets, Bonds and Investments.

WHAT ARE SOME OF THE DISTINCTIVE FEATURES OF THE FEDERAL RESERVE BANKING SYSTEM?

Although called "Federal Reserve Banks," not a share of stock in these institutions is owned by the government.

The Federal Reserve system deals only with banks and with the government and does not deal with individuals so far as banking transactions are concerned.

The Federal Reserve system is owned by banks (national and state) and neither the government nor individuals possess any stock in the system.

The directors of the Federal Reserve bank are elected, two-thirds by member banks and one-third by the government. These directors, along with others, make the Federal Reserve bank very truly what they have often been termed "bankers' banks."

The advantages of such a system are numerous, including great elasticity of currency. It is probable that now that this system is in force in the United States there will never be another financial panic such as shook the country in 1907.

YOUR BIRTHDAY

MONDAY, DEC. 1.

Persons born this day are destined to succeed and be happy through the exercise of their own ambition.

Perhaps if they were a little more prone to take the advice of others it would lessen the worry that may come with advancement.

Love affairs will be successful, providing there is a little discretion in selecting a life mate.

MANCHESTER, England, Dec. 1.—A pursesnatcher, running from police through a crowded street at night, dodged into a hotel lobby and was lost. Later a police saw a figure in a telephone booth in the lobby and approached the booth cautiously with drawn guns. In the booth they found the figure of a clothing dummy that the clever robber had placed there as a decoy.

OFFICE BOY BECOMES WASTEBASKET 'KING'

BERLIN, Dec. 1.—The rise to wealth and fame of Herman Lought through the manufacture of cardboard wastebaskets is one of the sensations of Germany's post-war industry. He was only an office boy when he conceived the idea of making cheap receptacles. Now he is called the "Henry Ford of the wastebasket industry."

YOUR DREAMS

Dreaming of undergoing a surgical operation is a favorable sign that you will soon gain relief from annoying conditions.

Many such dreams recorded have also been followed by business success and by voyages that have been proven quite pleasant.

Hands that float through your visions without any apparent cause are beckoning you away from your present conditions to success.

To be pursued in your dreams is a caution not to speak your mind.

BEGIN HERE TODAY

Corrigan, proprietor of the great Orange-Rutch estate, is bound for some in the little Dutch coasting steamer Haulah. Another passenger on the boat is Mrs. Irene Matheson. Corrigan's great first tells the brutal first mate, who has been abusing a wife woman, working in his salt act is applauded by Mrs. Matheson.

Corrigan and Irene Matheson go ashore at Labuan, and Corrigan arms that her husband is Hope-Matheson, a man of ill-repute throughout Borneo.

Corrigan, at Labuan, Corrigan shows Mrs. Matheson the little image of a man carved in bone. There is only one other cat like it in the world, he says, and that is in the possession of the man he is destined to marry.

At Labuan, Hope-Matheson enters the scene, drunk and abusive, and threatens to break every bone in Corrigan's body. Hope-Matheson takes his wife away and Corrigan remains behind to wait for the next boat.

As soon as that?

Must, Duty calls! Not like you, you know, that can wander world's surface at will. For to lose anyone working in Labuan?

Corrigan innocently.

Very cryptic in the long white and, leaving Raikes' men to wait for themselves, made their way to the club house on the hill.

Corrigan sat by the veranda railing into the night which throbbed insect life. The chair opposite was temporarily vacant; Raikes, bending over a table, yarning a trio of old acquaintances.

Is of sinister laughter came from a room, the bar emitted one of voices, the merry clinking of glasses; a cracked piano thumped dul music from an adjacent band.

Corrigan caught snatches of conversation, the tagends of club fragments of time-worn chatter. Suddenly he sat up, listening.

A damn shame! someone was saying. "Wonder she went back to him."

Is she made her come. No end of wrong will. Been livin' away Singapore for ages."

"Blinking himself to death," put in a voice. Came into my office the last night; we're his own you know. He was pretty blot eleven in the morning. Told me a rambling story of his wife and how she fell at Labuan. I think it was a woman was going to make her for it."

She whistled softly.

"I kill her, I know Hope Matheson. I've had the pleasure of work for him. He's a hell of a brother he's roused—and there's not an living dare tackle him. I saw lay out a big coolie with the foot his hand."

A tip of men moved away from the door by Corrigan's elbow, still talking. Bands of perspiration stood out Corrigan's forehead. He bent his still the great muscles trembled and burst his tunics.

Suddenly as he sat there, something from the outer darkness and on to the table. He picked it up and turned it over and over and over his fingers. It was a small blue envelope with a head, a subtle felt like a pebble, radiating one corner. He smoothed it and read, in a trembling femininity: "Corrigan, Esq."

He opened the envelope and drew a single sheet of foreign note.

"For the sake, come to me," he read, he prepared for anything. Irene.

Therewith on to the wooden surface he saw, his startled eyes, the image of a Chinese cat—the exact replica of the cat still rested in the both of his pocket.

Corrigan's guide had disappeared. He fasted his pony to a post and saw, through the vast forest of mature rubber trees, the bright lights of a house close on twenty-four hours had elated since he had received that Mrs. O. S. He prayed to heaven had not come too late. He smiled only as he strode up the steps, put glancing over to right and to left, the variances of a man who is accustomed to walk in strange places and for consequences. Cost what it might, he had come to steal the wife, the man none other dared tackle, "from the end of the earth."

He had looked her, and Corrigan never brot failed.

Present he halted and listened intently. There was a noise going on up there, he puzzled him. As he started forward again, he knew, rather than tw that someone was coming toward him. He darted behind a tree, as to dim outline of a swart native swung into view on the path ten yards above him. Corrigan could just make out a conical hat and something the man carried over his right shoulder. He had heard in Perak of a native hunter of Borneo named Hope-Matheson. When you see a native carrying a sword on his shoulder—take no risk," he had been warned. Corrigan took no risks. He sprang on Hope-Matheson's backman like a tiger, and knocked him senseless with the muzzle of his revolver.

As he emerged into the open land beyond the trees a gust of smoke swept from a veritable furnace chomping fire and in it like a rim of steel, the fast consuming head-quarters of Hope-Matheson.

Above the sound of crackling wood and the crackling of falling timbers, he thought he heard a man's voice, singing. The wild song, borne on the breeze that fanned the flames until the roof of dried sap-leaves burst into a sea of leaping fire, grew louder and louder, and presently, the great form of the planter lurched into view. Like a man in a dream, Corrigan watched him feeding the flames from a petrol can, the very surface of the metal container flecked with tongues of light.

Corrigan caught him by the arm and swung him round to face him. The madman clutched at his coat, but Corrigan got there first. He held a blue barrel under Hope-Matheson's nose.

"Out with it, you hell-bound!" he shouted, his head thrust forward. "What have you done with her?"

The planter's glassy eyes surveyed him from head to toe.

"You know who you're talking to?" he demanded drunkenly, waving one arm like a pump-handle. "Because if you don't I'll tell you."

Corrigan, beside himself, struck him several times in the chest. "Quick," he almost screamed. "Where is she?"

"She—Oh!—Irene?" A cunning look came into his eyes. "You're a trifle too late, old son," he said. "Be hold! Her funeral pyre!"

"My God!" cried Corrigan, and plunged in through the doorway, under an archway of fire. He heard the maniac shouting incoherently after him, heard him empty his revolver into the inferno. He found a bedroom. It was unoccupied, but he dipped a towel into a water jug and knotted it behind his head. In a third apartment, where the blazing roof showered glowing fragments, he found her, bound hand and foot. The terror faded from her eyes as she recognized him, even before he had torn the towel from his head. He soaked it again and fastened it round her, then bore her, like a doll, through the tottering ruin into the outer air beneath the stars.

The roof crashed in behind him and a furnace, in which no living thing could survive, roared to the heavens.

Corrigan, gulping for breath, carried her beyond the zone of the conflagration. He cut her bonds, drawing the rope gently from the raw wounds it had made at her wrists and ankles. With the moistened towel he extinguished those portions of their clothing in which the fire had taken hold.

Presently he stood back from her, his hands on his hips.

"I might have guessed you had that cat," he said simply, for all the world as if nothing unusual had happened. "She wasn't a fortune-teller, that Damon girl; she was a thought reader! I believe now that I loved you when I first set eyes on you, only circumstances had made me blind. She gave you that little hint while I was in my cabin!"

Irene Matheson nodded. As she looked up at him, resting on both of her hands, Corrigan thought he had never seen anyone so beautiful in all his life before.

"She was a thought reader, Corrigan," she said. She had never heard his other name.

Suddenly she screamed aloud and pointed wildly into what was left of the house.

Corrigan looked. He saw a small head on giant shoulders hang for a moment, twitching convulsively, grotesquely, in the very center of the inferno—then pitch forward into the blaze.

He held her in front of him on his sturdy pony, cantering toward the dawn.

She looked up at him through misty eyes. With that firm arm supporting her, she felt as though she could never be tired again.

"Corrigan's way," she murmured, echoing something he had once said. "You can't beat it."

Bernardi Face Toughest Opponent Here Tonight

Smiling Dusek In City Confident Of Beating the Wop

BY BILL ARCHER
The News Sports Editor

TONY BERNARDI, perhaps the most popular grappler who ever donned a pair of trunks and tight to represent Port Arthur in the wrestling arena, goes up against one of the toughest, nerviest, browniest grapplers in Elks theater tonight at 8 o'clock he has faced this season when he meets Rudy Dusek of Little Rock, Ark.

Rudy, fresh as the proverbial fiddle and fit for the fray, arrived in Port Arthur at 5:45 o'clock Sunday afternoon, greeted a few of his old acquaintances and looked up his brother-in-law, Rusty Davis, who is a well-known athlete of this city himself.

Bernardi faces struggle. Bernardi, to win over Dusek tonight, must put up even a tougher scrap than he presented against either Jim Stewart or Clarence Eklund, for Rudy Dusek this season has won decisions over both men. Stewart, who is a former champion, and Eklund, who is a former champion, are both well-known athletes of this city.

Lee O. Smith, coach of the local high school, who refereed the championship match between Eklund and Bernardi, will officiate as third man in the ring tonight, while John Bourne and J. D. Bryan will act as timekeepers. Jim Stewart, professional, will referee the preliminaries through courtesy.

The evening program arranged for the athletic club, which is the main attraction, should furnish enough thrills and excitement to keep the fans agog with entertainment. Young Ned Dugas, class appearing athlete yet in his teens, will meet one of Port Arthur's aspirant stars, his opponent for the semifinal match not having been named, while a "wrestle royal" will furnish the opening attraction and should be of fun.

A New Attraction. Many Port Arthur fans have witnessed a "battle royal" in which from four or six contestants battle with boxing gloves at the same time. But there are few here who have ever seen a "wrestle royal." So tonight, the promoters have arranged a "wrestle royal" in which five husky young boys will take part, all wrestling at the same time. Such a match usually simmers down to the "survival of the fittest" and sends a contestant hurrying out of the ring in a hurry sometimes. This bit of fun added to the bill should be a splat part of the program.

Dusek and Bernardi will follow the semifinal match in which Young Dugas will appear again, their match getting under way at the earliest time possible, following the prelims.

Dusek's Second Trip. Dusek is in Port Arthur for the second time since he came south a few years ago. On his initial appearance here, he met and defeated Mike Thompson, the man of mystery who was said to have hailed from Billy Sandow's stable, and who is understood to have "sunk" in the phenomenal Paul Jones and a few others down this way for a finish match up in Nebraska that didn't pan out so well for Paul. Dusek withstood the punishment Thompson had to offer, and conquered the victor. It was a pretty match, well-balanced and will be recalled by the fans here as having furnished plenty of entertainment that night at the Elks.

Recently, in Dallas, Texas, Dusek topped the "grand old man of the mats," Eklund, and Jim Stewart, now wintering in Port Arthur, and who has been helping Tony Bernardi train out for the Little Rock boy, in straight falls. Stewart lasted 55 minutes against Dusek, a surprise, considering the husky showman had been barely aware that the second fall had gone under way. Dusek followed these two matches with an appearance in his home city of Little Rock, and trimmed George McLeod, Canadian heavyweight, in straight falls after two hours and 25 minutes in another exciting bill.

Victories over such men as this constitute are repeated to you fans only for the sake of letting you know the laydown of the last loss in the game, and that isn't saying that Tony isn't a good one himself, for he is.

PIRATES LOSE TO HURRICANES

Special to The News.

GALVESTON, Texas, Dec. 1.—The Galveston Hurricanes triumphed over the Pirates from Port Arthur here yesterday, defeating the visiting independent football machine 10 and 6 in one of the most bitterly contested games that has been played here.

The defeat suffered at the hands of the Hurricanes was the first administered to the Pirates in practically four years. The Hurricanes, themselves holding a record for victories, lost their first game in two years to the Pirates in Port Arthur a week before, 13 to 0. Previously, the two teams had played a 0-0 game in Port Arthur before a huge crowd of spectators.

Here yesterday, Rust and Youkum were the outstanding stars, the former, for the locals, getting them down under every punt, while Youkum was in the leading number of plays for the visitors. The Pirates yesterday were unable to penetrate the Hurricane line, which they had smashed at will a week before.

PIRATES TO PLAY COLLEGIANS SATURDAY.

The Pirates, who returned from Galveston last night defeated for the first time in four years, will begin intensive training this week for the South Park Collegians, who they meet at Pleasure Pier gridiron here Saturday. The game has been called for 3 o'clock.

IN A FOURM, AT LONDON, IN 1915, THE SECOND SHOT HIT THE FIRST BALL DRIVEN, SENDING IT FORWARD SEVERAL YARDS.

Can you imagine a player's ball after he had made a fair long drive, leaving him the rest of the game to drive off? This happened at the Pirates' game in April, 1913, and the first ball was kicked ahead several yards as a result.

At the opening of the new course at Bradford Moor, England, in June, 1907, H. A. Lovebridge, the shingle, found his ball stuck on a barpin. It took Lovebridge five puts to get that pesky ball into the hole as the barpin was too firmly imbedded to be loosened by the club during play.

A man might be hit on the head with a golf ball, but it is not so much as a baseball. The ball of an English hero, who had to take one putt.

NEW COTTON MARKET OPENS

Officials Attend the Opening Ceremonies
CHICAGO, Dec. 1.—The Chicago cotton market, a new development in the history of the local board of trade, opened fairly active, with prices on a regular parity with New York.
The first sale recorded was a January consignment to Joe Schreiner, a leading local trader, at 23.40. Several New York representatives were in attendance and were active bidders.
Government officials, business leaders of the west and southwest participated at the opening ceremonies.
Opening of the cotton exchange was the result of years of agitation for creation of a futures market in Chicago.

MILLION IN AMERICA ARE VICTIMS OF "DOPE"
DETROIT, Mich., Dec. 1.—More than 1,000,000 people in the United States are victims of the drug habit. The average age of the heroin addict is 22 years. America consumes four times as much "dope" as all Europe combined. These startling facts were pointed out by A. W. Frye, supreme commander of the Maccabees in an address here.

5-CENT U. S. STAMPS BRING $3,450 AT SALE

Queen Mary of England sometimes does not appear so gorgeously dressed in her photographs on formal occasions. But how about this costume? She was going to a picture show.

Jail Fire Victims Remain Unidentified

HOUSTON, Dec. 1.—Despite numerous messages from Texas cities and from nearby states and the visits of hundreds of people over the week end, the identity of two youths who perished in the Katy jail fire remains a mystery.
All through Saturday and Sunday a constant stream of people passed through the morgue where the partially burned bodies lay. There was no recognition.
Fire of undetermined origin started in the little eight by ten sheet iron cell in which they were confined and the two died long before flames broke through the wooden exterior telling of the terrible tragedy.

ADVENTURES OF THE TWINS

Well, Tom Tinker guessed it anyway," said the Riddle Lady, "and he gets a prize—a bottle of perfume."

"Here's a riddle for everybody to guess," said the Riddle Lady. "It's very easy—as plain as the nose on your face."
Nancy and Nick and all of Mrs. Olin's visitors stopped talking and listened with all their might.
This was the riddle:
"I beat you to bed, I beat you to school, and I beat you getting home again. No matter where you go or what you do you never catch up to me. I am right before you, yet you never see me. Who am I?"
"A shadow," guessed Nimble Jack.
"No," said the Riddle Lady.
"The wind," guessed Johnny Sprigg.
"No," said the Riddle Lady.
"Aha, I know!" cried Tom Tinker. "It's your nose."
"No, your nose," laughed the Riddle Lady. "My nose doesn't beat you to school and beat you home again. It's your own nose."
"You should say one's nose," corrected the Wise Man. "If you wish to know anything about grammar, come to me."
"Well, Tom Tinker guessed it anyway," said the Riddle Lady, "and he gets prize—a bottle of perfume."
"Humph! I should think a pinch of snuff would be more like it," sniffed Dr. Foster.
"Aren't there any more riddles?" asked Nancy who got tired of so much talking.
"Yes," said the Riddle Lady. (To be continued.)

CHILD'S STORY OF THE HUMAN RACE

By Uncle RAY

MORE ABOUT EARLY NEWSPAPERS
France was not far behind England in getting out printed newspapers. The first French newspaper seems to have been put out by a doctor named Renaudot. It is said that he had a liking for talking with his patients. Perhaps he was not a very good doctor, but he surely had a "nose for news." When no one was sick, he would make a call anyway in order to find out the latest gossip. At last he decided to print what he learned. He asked the rulers of Paris to let him put out a newspaper and was given the right.
London was for a long time the only place in England where newspapers were printed. Then Cromwell managed to start a paper in Scotland; and one was started in Ireland at about the same time.
Fifty years later, a newspaper was published at Norwich, England. The price was "one penny," but it was added that "a half-penny will not be refused." That paper was called The Norwich Postman. It was well named, for the news from other places had to come by mail since there was no telegraph or telephone. Even nowadays, papers are often called The Post or The Mail; their names date back to the old custom of getting news from "the postman."

At about the same time as The Norwich Postman was started, newspapers were first printed in America—at Boston and New York. The editors of those papers used to "hire someone to watch—for ships coming in from Europe. Those ships would bring newspapers, which were full of items people on this side wanted to read. If news found abroad could be printed when only six or eight weeks old, it was a deed to be proud of.

Nowadays we can get important news from Europe by cable. It is often printed within an hour after it happens.

PICTURES SENT BY WIRELESS

Sketch Crosses Ocean By Radio Process
NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—Pictures wireless from London in 20 minutes appeared today in New York newspapers through a new process called photodiagram developed by the Radio Corporation of America.
The pictures were transmitted from the Marconi house in London after being translated into radio impulses. A mechanism in the corporation's office here received the impulses and translated them into pictures.
The first to be sent were two likenesses of President Coolidge, one a pen and ink sketch, the other a photograph. The radio signals were made to sketch the president with a fountain pen on a revolving cylinder of paper and at the same time to control a light beam which traveled over a film and rephotographed Mr. Coolidge. Both the sending and receiving are simultaneous.

Old College Bell To Broadcast Peel
MANHATTAN, Kan., Dec. 1.—The tones of the old college bell will be carried to thousands of alumni of Kansas State Agricultural College when the college radio station, KSAC, 341 meters, takes the air tonight for the first time.

Dedication of the new station will include speeches by Governor Allen of Kansas; a talk by Emma Harris Bowen, member of the college's first graduating classes; musical numbers by the school's band; a glee club.

The program starts at 8 o'clock.
